A Coincidence

R. M. Hobart of Calgary and G. K. McLean of Champion had rather an unusual incident occur recently, while driving miles on their respective cars, namely a Terrible trip and a Fort V.S. Mr. McLean questioned Mr. Hobart regarding the mileage on his car, stating that his speedometer was registered 8635.2 210 miles. Upon investigating his mileage Mr. Hobart discovered that it was identical to the tenth with Mr. McLean's.

Buy's Champion Dog

Quenion, a Llewellyn setter owned by Fred Clever was recently purchased by Charlie Hugg of Cle Elum, Washington. Mr. Hugg was in Alberta on a hunting trip and while in Champion used the dog on several of his hunting trips and was very pleased with her work. Mr. Hugg left last week for his home in Washington and expects to return to Alberta next year during the hunting season.

W. I. Visited Classroom

Frank Caldwell purchased several acres of beet tops at Picture Butte and at present is trucking them to his farm here. They are being piled in rows about a foot or more high and in this manner will be preserved for winter feed. I. Granlin and Norman Patterson have purchased several loads from Mr. Caldwell.

Car Smashed Up

I. Granlin damaged his Ford V-8 considerably on Friday, when, while driving south on the highway, he was forced to take to the ditch to avoid striking a rock. The iron bent him back but didn't break his vision. The car was up and走ably damaged. Mr. Granlin fortunately was not injured. The car was taken to Calgary for repairs.

Tree Available For Farmers

With reference to the all-important function of tree planting in Alberta, we are learning in the new government of the Hon. C. R. Ross, Minister of Lands and Mines, that certain types of trees are available for farmers for transplanting and could be secured for this purpose on application to the Forestry Division of the government.

Available for planting in the spring of 1937, the Ministry continued, will be limited quantities of white spruce, jack pine, green ash and elm. There will also be a moderate amount of Douglas fir, larch, with which Mr. F. G. S. Service has been experimenting successfully and of which a few may be given out for trial. In addition to these a large number of balsam poplar, aspen, birch, the tree root system available for distribution. These trees are recommended for planting in this province.

To avoid possible confusion, application is to be made to the Forest Director of Forests, Department of Lands and Mines, Edmonton, the Minister concluded. Farmers properly filled out to quantity and species required should, he added, be sent in to the Department before the end of the present year for trees required for planting next spring.

Seven Varieties Of Maple

Sugar Oil Butter Eggs Flour Onions

There are over 100 varieties of maple trees in the world, but only one of the seventy yields sugar in commercial quantities. This is the sugar maple, the tree which grows in Canada from the Atlantic Ocean to the Lake of the Woods and in the eastern United States. Its beautiful leaf is the national emblem of the Dominion, and 95 per cent. of the maple products industry in Canada is at present confined to the St. Lawrence River valley.

— A NOVEL BY —
GEORGIA GRAIG

"What was there to do? I told the attendants to see that he got into his car all right. Such carion was not worth selling my hands over."

Pain tore at Starr's heart. His words were quickly chosen, but there was something in his careless tone. What he really meant, it was plain to her, was that her honor was not worth soiling his hands over!

A twenty-dollar bill was tucked in his coat pocket. His play-boy path wherever he went. An icy hand clutched at Starr's heart. For he was quite as plain to her that he expected his money to win her. In his own way, on his own terms.

Not for a moment, though, would she have let him know she realized that. With a flash of her old bravado, she said flippantly:

"And what does that make me?"

Her black eyebrows lifted slightly, as she smiled, with a touch of indulgence.

"I hope it makes you my cavalier for the evening, at least," he said, his voice low, almost a whisper. There was a wealth of meaning in his tone, which she could not quite fathom.

"I hope it does," she said, with a touch of indulgence.

Starr turned away from him with a wave of his rebuff. Lance Marlowe was quickly gone; was trained to the nuances of feminine emotion. He saw his mistake instantly, and his face dimmed.

She should have known better than to use my usual line on you." There was a touch of insolence intended. Then he shrugged. "I suppose you're not wanting to stay any longer now, at least I can see you can't. Your car's got your wrap for you, or something?"

Starr cried out almost in a panic. "No—no! Nothing! And I have no intention of running away from—oh, not you."

But in spite of her dry, weary eyes, she was coming from him. Anywhere to get away. She had said she wanted to stay, but all she really wanted to do was to get away from him. She was letting that show in her face.

It was not in any way what she had expected it would be. Living out her span in drab obscurity was better, five months—than this!

Half blinded with the tears she ran, she turned back as she reached the balcony, her coltus with something that stopped her flight.

The strong, vital body of a man. A second face was buried against the front of a starched shirt; then she looked up.

"For Heaven's sake! Where do you think you're going? Out to do some kind of a record?"

Michael's hands were gripping her shoulders. Michael's face beamed down at her. He was so full of life, so full of energy, that she could not notice his agitation. He could take things lightly like that, make humorous remarks, laugh when her heart was breaking!

Again she was conscious of the strong, vital body of a man. The sense like an intoxicant in her blood, that sent it singing along through every vein in her body. She fought against it desperately. Why must it be like that?

She was so pleased that he almost hugged her. Yet his pleasure was simply that of a man who has just put over a good business deal. It was all in the head, not the heart. He grimmed, standing off to look at her with his head cocked a little to one side.

"Pretty swell!" he commented. "You are marvelous, Starr—superb! Everything is going just as we planned; better than we planned. You'll be the talk of the town when we get back."

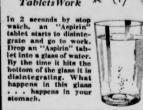

The causal coquettishness of the man! As long as his own end was served, what did he care the price a woman paid? But how could she know he was congenitally lacking in the desire to pay? "Or is it perhaps that Lance Marlowe has offered you a more attractive proposition? He would!"

She glared at him, breathless in her instantaneous rage fury.
